Why did you start Blogging?

As a child I was always the girl with my head buried in books either writing or reading and education is a hugely important part of my life. Blogging to me is a fantastic creative outlet and means of self-expression and one that brings great fulfilment whilst allowing me to connect with an audience of readers. My mother is my biggest inspiration and always encouraged me to work hard and be strong and independent as a woman and this vision definitely comes across in my blog content where you will also find articles on education, empowerment and equality.

A Little Bit About Yourself

My name is Grace and I am the girl behind "Grace With Love Blog" a new Irish lifestyle blog mixing fashion and beauty with educational content and opinion writing. I grew up in the beautiful Carlow countryside and am studying for my Bachelor of Education in Mary Immaculate College where I am now almost qualified as a primary school teacher. My passions and interests are varied ranging from reading, writing and art to fashion, fitness, mental health awareness, business, politics and current affairs. Grace With Love Blog being "a blog with style and substance" aims to portray the above ethos.

Your Best Beauty Tip

If you have a hectic schedule and are always on the go like me my handiest go-to-beauty look includes a simple pop of colour on the lips and white liner on the inner rim of the eye. This is very effective to help you look refreshed, awake and put together even if you are running low on time. It is amazing the difference a red lip can make, it is an instant mood-booster and thoroughly deserving of cult beauty status!

Your Top Tan Tip

Being naturally pale I feel it is important to embrace your own complexion. I am quite unreliable when it comes to tanning and only apply products occasionally. Convenience is definitely key to me when it comes to tanning! I love products that can be applied in a flash and are not too ambitious to upkeep and maintain. Also, never underestimate the importance of using a mitt to ensure a streak-free glow!
